Translation Notes

Page 44 – Akane Yanagi

Yanagi's full name is written with the characters for "bright (music) note" and "willow tree." Akane, his first name, is also more commonly a girl's name. These facts could contribute to Toru thinking Yanagi's name is cool.

Page 56 – The moon-viewing one

This is a famous McDonald's item in Japan. First released in 1991, it's basically just a burger with a fried egg on it (to represent the moon), but it's only available in September during the traditional "moon-viewing" period. It's popular enough that many people want it to be a year-round item.

Page 85 – Type O

In Japan, blood types are said to influence personality. Type O people tend to be extroverts who are spontaneous, enthusiastic, and good at adapting to situations.

Page 143 – Cawley battles and pole-tapping

Cawley battles are fought by two teams, each team is split into groups of four, with three members carrying the fourth (the "rider"). The riders must either unseat riders from the other team or steal their cloth headbands. The winning team is the one with the most unseated riders at the end. In pole-tapping, each team has a long pole that they must defend. The goal is to topple the opposing team's pole to a certain angle (usually thirty degrees) before they topple your team's pole that far.

Page 148 – Henneka

A Henneka is a Mohi demon mask that symbolizes female jealousy, anger, or regretfulness.
